The program itself is a wonderful opportunity for young students to push themselves, grow, and start an amazing career early. As well as older students to do the same for a new beginning, both in their career and life. The organization of the school is where issues arise, infrastructure and rules changing spontaneously, and feelings of annoyance or disinterest from faculty. Some professors truly care for the students to learn and have a proper understanding of material but unfortunately most do not. There is an understanding of this program being accelerated comes with challenges and a greater workload, however, if everything was clear and consistent along with professors who have a genuine interest and passion for furthering education, students will feel more confident and	prefer not to say	26-35	$0-$19,999	Employed Full-Time		Somewhat likely

43	No	Math shouldn't only be an hour; the professor is great but she doesn't have enough time in comparison to English being 3 hours. Majority of my classes dismiss early which would be nice if we had a great understanding of the material. The lecture notes suck for someone who likes pen and paper. How am I to transfer 30 pages of textbook into study able notes? 		The school feels disorganized and unsupportive, especially for students who have children or work full-time. Assignments are excessive, exams are stressful and distracting, and students are often treated with suspicion instead of trust. Communication is inconsistent across multiple platforms, grades take too long to be released, and there is no opportunity to review tests or learn from mistakes before finals. Overall, these issues create confusion and discourage learning, particularly for older or nontraditional students.

	We are interested in your personal experiences in thecommunity surrounding your campus in the past year. If you would like to elaborate on these experiences, please do so here.	Only a handful of professors and campus staff genuinely have students’ best interests at heart. Professors Hahl, Grant, Burton, and Porras stand out for their dedication; they give their best during lectures, clearly love what they do, and are always willing to support students whenever approached. On the administrative side, Ms. Nicole from Bursar’s and Ms. Linda from Financial Aid consistently go above and beyond. They greet students with warmth, kindness, and respect, and they actively work to help resolve scheduling or administrative challenges with compassion. Unfortunately, Claudia’s support is inconsistent—she can be helpful when in a good mood, but more often interactions are marked by hostility, disrespect, and at times even verbal abuse. At the leadership level, the President appears approachable and gives the impression of listening to student concerns, yet rarely provides follow-through or resolution. The Deans, on the other hand, tend not to listen at all; they often become defensive when issues are raised, making it not only unproductive but also risky, as students fear potential academic retaliation for speaking up.

79	Yes	My personal experience on a level of respect has been fine as far as the professors and some staff. My biggest issue that has caused me to reconsider my attendance at SPSON is the disorganization particularly when it comes to clinical scheduling. This is my third semester not starting on time for clinical even though I have consistently been compliant in all required forms. It becomes very difficult at times to focus on my studies when I must also worry about my clinical being pushed back, extended, or changed to different days/locations. In addition, it is quite frustrating to constantly switch my availability at work due to the discrepancies with the scheduling. Concerns that I have shared with particular members of the clinical administration team have failed to appropriately be addressed as evidenced by my current clinical schedule/placement. I do feel ignored in the sense that my punctuality with clinical compliance does not seem to positively affect my clinical scheduling. It feels like I don't matter to staff when clinical does not start on time and I am notified the night prior. It is hurtful and offensive to feel that my current responsibilities outside of SPSON have been constantly disregarded even though I am always prepared. To be blunt, there's a lot of penalty and expectations placed on students, but there is zero accountability on the end of the clinical team for poor communication and lack of readiness on the students' behalf. 86	Yes	This college is good when it comes to learning. I’ve learn a lot and it has been only two months since I’m here. But, some of the staff have attitude problems and think they have the right. It has been more than once that I’ve met hostility within the workers and that makes you lose motivation to continue going to college. It would be a lot better if the staff treated us better and if the teachers actually were there to help us.	Hispanic, Latino, or Spanish origin	18-25	$60,000-$69,999	Unemployed	Somewhat unlikely

95	No	Professor Tchaiko Hicks has been a very disappointing educator in which she has been late to class from the beginning of the semester and has been a very hypocritical person in telling the students to follow policy when she can't even arrive on time for her own class. In addition, to being unprepared almost every class causing time to be wasted and not learning anything productive for therapeutic communications. 200	Yes	The teachers don't even seem like they want to be here, and they have no problem making that obvious. The administration acts like they're not biased, but the moment you bring up an issue with a teacher, they never bother to investigate. I had a problem with one teacher and was told to send an email explaining what I could've done differently, and that a meeting would be set up to address the miscommunication. That meeting never happened, so now I'm left having to just deal with it and let the teacher talk to me any kind of way — all in the name of education. 238	Yes	It's rude to create a small group of students in which you share the same language and speak that language among others that don't. Then explain that you red to tell them some personally. So they should pull them aside and speak to them privately, cause you're still talking in front of other students that speak the other language. If we all speak English then that's what we all should talk.	Two or More Races	18-25	$0-$19,999	Unemployed	Somewhat likely

I've noticed that some of the nursing students have this superiority complex towards MA students. I have seen them do things that are really just .. bullying. We are all too old for that. It doesn't bother me, I have tough skin but I have seen the impact is has on my classmates. It discourages them and brings the mood down. Perhaps we can have some extracurricular activities or labs where both groups can mingle?
